Purpose:

This research aims to study the harmful narratives of anti-Asian hate speech amidst the COVID-19 crisis. Understanding the narratives is crucial in comprehending the messages conveyed, the entities being targeted, and the impacts on targeted communities. This research will help gather the necessary information to design intervention strategies.

Participant Involvement:

As a participant, you will read some social media posts of anti-Asian hate speech, rate the perceived level of harmfulness for each instance, and provide justifications.

Exclusion/Inclusion Criteria:

To participate in this study, you must:

- Be 18 years of age or older
- Fluent in English
- NOT be located in the United Kingdom (UK), a European Union (EU) country, or the Republic of China (PRC) due to the General Protection Data Regulation (GDPR) and Personal Information Protection Law (PIPL).

Procedures:

At the beginning of the study, you will be given a brief description of the research purpose and process. Then, you will (1) fill out an entry questionnaire that collects demographic information and your belief in hate speech harm, (2) answer questionnaires to annotate, and (3) provide justifications for your annotations and general comments.

Risks:

It is possible that some of the content may contain health misconceptions or hate speech. Since you will be interacting with content that could be misinformative, we recommend you critically verify any content that you see before believing it. You are also encouraged to verify with fact-checking websites (such as Snopes, PolitiFact, and FactCheck) to avoid falling for misconceptions.

In reading hateful speech, some content may provoke unpleasant feelings or experiences. You may choose to decline to answer any questions for any reason. In addition, you may choose to stop participation at any time.
